Not so very long ago in a place not so very far away, there dwelt many People in a Forest called Wake. Amongst these People were students of lore, men of wisdom, many fools, and perpetrators of justice. Between these cavers are recorded the Legends of the Forest as it was in the year of our Lord Nineteen Hundred and Seventy-Four. These chronicles are dedicated to all those who created the Legends of the Forest in that memorable year.

At the Northern reaches of the Realm stood a great Quad covered with fragrant grasses and looming elms. Here the people would occasionally gather and play in the shadows of the castle, Reynolda, which housed the Lords of the Realm. It was they who guided the people in everything they did and kept constant vigil for their safety. Many of the people of the Forest thought that the Spirit of the Realm dwelt in the Castle also. Yet, the Elders, wise with the wisdom of years, knew that it could be found only amongst the people of the Forest.

The Guilds

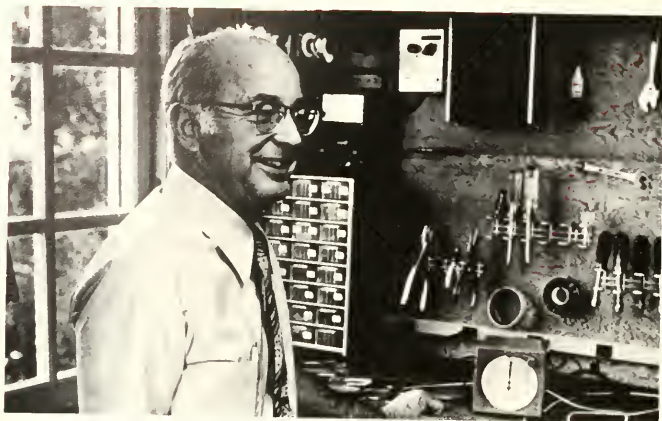

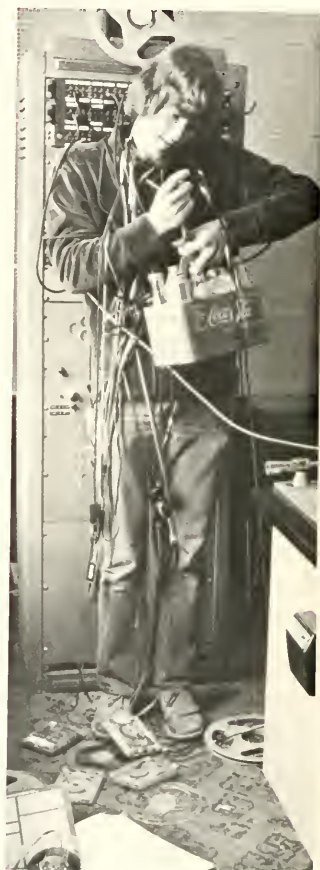

to occupy their leisure and fulfill their pleasure some people of the Forest would join one of the Guilds of the Realm. Here they would come together during their idle hours and produce works of wisdom, art, or culture. Some of the less aesthetically endowed Guilds would endeavor to bring joy to the people of the Forest by directing them in their search for the guiding Light.

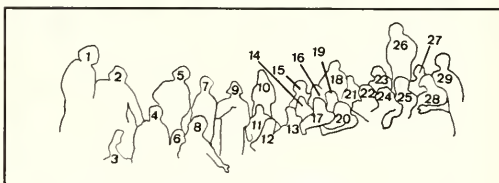

Unlike the Guilds of other lands, those of the Forest were open to any one who cared to join. Apprenticeship was seldom denied. Many of the People of the Forest thought this not to be so, and never sought membership of the Guilds, fearing ridicule and failure. The Masters of the Guilds were not the evil ogres, dragons, demons, or the nuclear spirits of popular conception, but some of the most benevolent and loving of the Forest. Theirs was the task of unifying and informing the People of the Forest, and in this they succeeded with great regularity.

The Orders

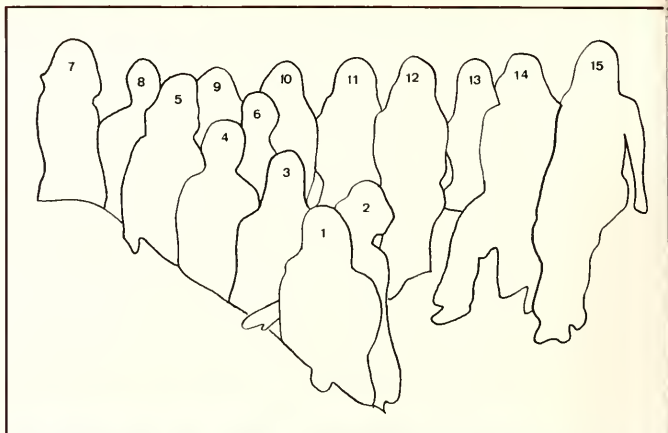

here existed in the Realm those fraternal and sororal orders dedicated to the mental and physical well-being of their members. It was their wont to celebrate the passing of all things, from the dawning morn to the ebbing twilight of late evening. Dedicated to the concept of eternal brotherhood and sisterhood, they bonded themselves in social communion. Their cause was perpetually propagated through the induction of new Bacchanalian converts.

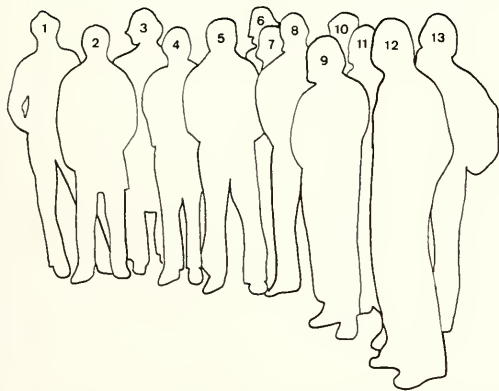

In order to preserve the union of body and spirit, certain rites and rituals were continually observed. These Epicurian rituals of bawdy self-indulgence and hoisterous behavior elevated the awareness and meaning of their social communion. In order to maintain these endeavors, the Orders practiced strenuous discipline, working to maintain High Standards among the People of the Forest.

The Tournaments

There were certain days in the Realm on which the athletes and warriors met in competition on the vast courts and greens of the Forest. If the weather were proper and the tournaments pleasing some of the people would gather in one of the many Stadia of the Forest to applaud their Knights. These Knights schooled in the art of competition from early childhood were only permitted to carry the Banner of the Realm after many long hours of tedious preparation. These young warriors were guided by Older Knights wisened in the competitive arts from life-times upon the field. These Mentors of the competitive arts attempted to hone the Knights, while at the same time building confidence and morale in the defenders of the Banner of the Realm.

The spirit of competition was instilled in all the members of the Forest, as they would often engage in games of a lesser sort in the pursuit of the glories of competition.

Though those who competed under the Banner of the Forest were not always victorious, they valiantly strove in pursuit of glory, experiencing the exhilarating thrill of victory, and the heartbreaking agony of defeat.

The New Season

Like the seasons of other enchanted lands, seasons of the Forest could be controlled and ordered. The convention of the Elders was able to call forth the fall, hold back the joys of summer, and decree holidays, days of feasting in the Forest.

In an age that has past, the Elders decided that the People of the Forest should have a short annual period of change, freezing their divergent activities for a time, leading them single-mindedly down different paths. Thus, the Elders invented Winter, a term when the cold came and the People of the Forest limited themselves to work on the favorite lore of one particular Elder. They became his apprentice alone for the one month term of Winter.

During Winter, Elders led people of the Forest to other lands and other lore. This new season caused dissention among the Elders. Some found the air of Winter cool and refreshing while others developed cold feet and turned away. This controversy persists in the Forest and Rumor of continued seasons of unaltered aridity crawls, creeps, slides, slithers, and slinks through the Realm.

EARTHQUAKE PARK

"Offered in conjunction with a trip to Japan by the Wake Forest University football team . . . This is a course designed to give a basic introduction to Japanese culture and politics . . ."

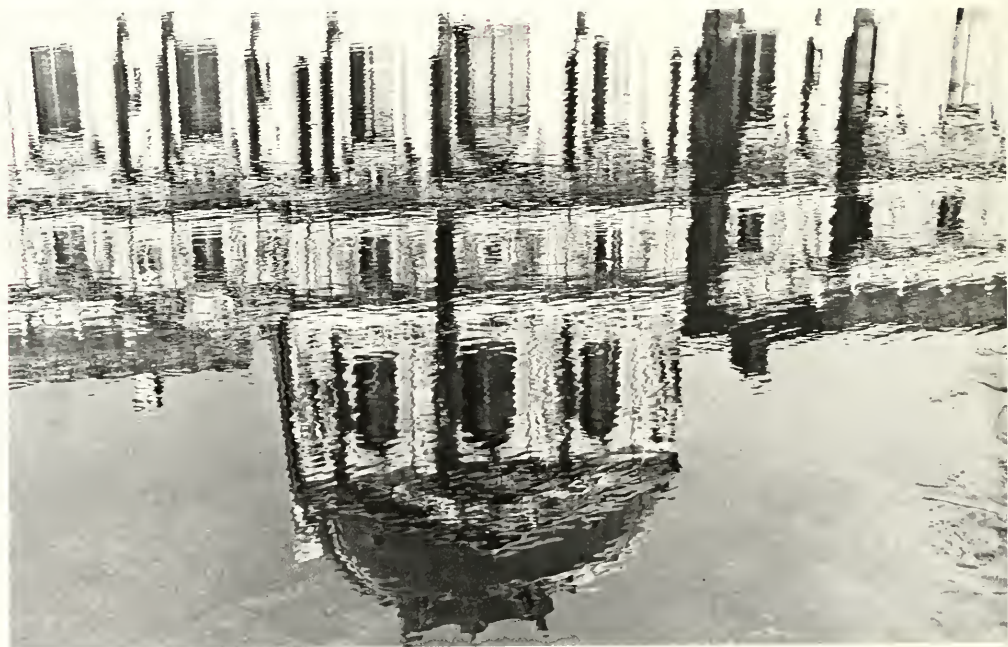

"... an opportunity to gain an introduction to the literary and cultural riches of London and its immediate environs ..."

"A study of the major museum collections in London, Paris, Rome, Florence, and Madrid, which emphasizes the primary works in these collections . . ."

"... an intensive examination of the culture and politics of the sixteenth-century Italian states and their influence on the French New Monarchy. The first half of the course will be taught in Venice, with study trips to such cultural centers as Florence and Milan, the second half in Paris..."

"Classroom study of Mexican and Central American archeological complexes, followed by tours of the major sites concerned . . . bullfights, Ballet Folklorico, and other cultural activities . . ."

"A look at the historic site in theory and in practice . . . sites within a relative short drive and . . . Colonial Williamsburg . . ."

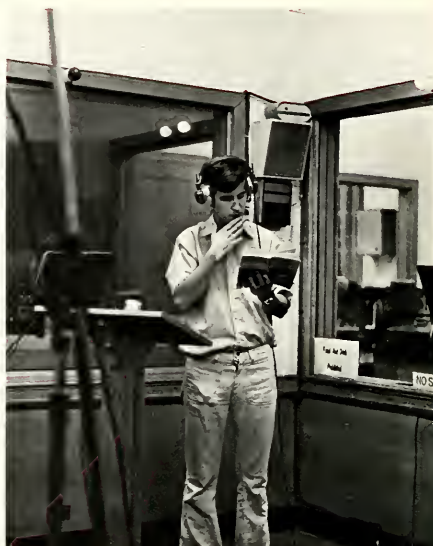

"Mastering the design and construction principles of equipment performing a number of instrumentation functions..."

"Projects can be anything the student can get approved by the department, such as research (both empirical and library), work experience . . ."

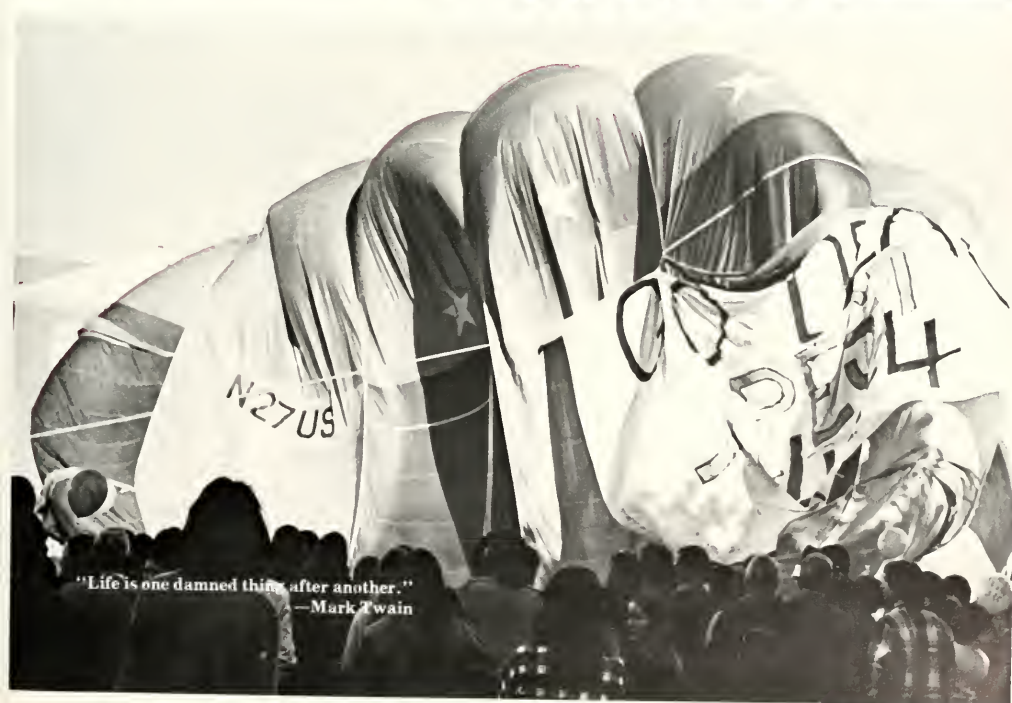

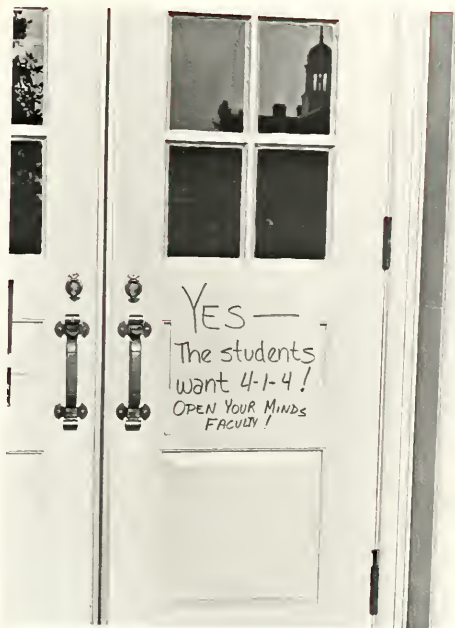

"The students will select and adapt the materials, prepare scripts, plan sound effects and accompanying music, rehearse and perform the programs and edit tapes for broadcasting . . ."

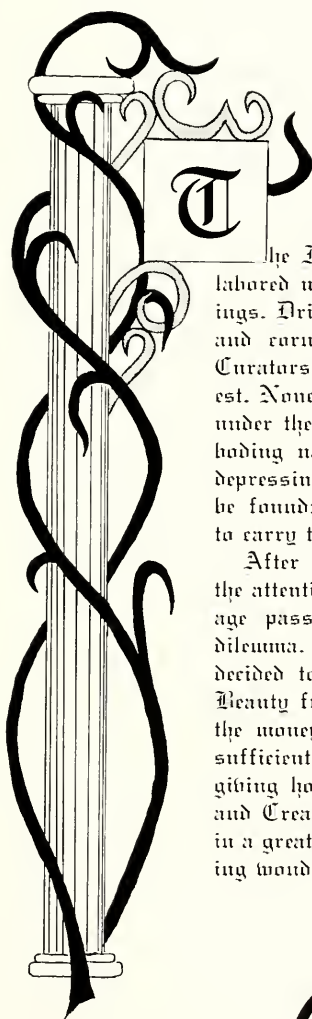

"The formation of a theatrical company for experimentation in contemporary theatre techniques . . ." " . . . a detailed study of several operas as well as the musical preparation and staging of various scenes from the operatic repertory to be performed . . ."

The Enchanted

The Forest was lush and green, but some labored under the burden of barren surroundings. Driven into dungeons and towers, closets and corners, these indigent people were the Curators and Creators of Beauty in the Forest. Nonetheless, these beloved artisans labored under these conditions. Because of their foreboding nature, few people journeyed into the depressing surroundings where Beauty was to be found; therefore, the artisans were forced to carry their burden alone.

After many years, these injustices came to the attention of the Lords and Elders. Yet, an age passed while the Lords pondered this dilemma. After great deliberation, the Lords decided to lift the Curators and Creators of Beauty from their hovels. They commissioned the money lenders and handlers to gather up sufficient wealth to accomplish this task, thus giving hope that in another age, the Curators and Creators of Beauty will be able to gather in a great Hall, dedicated to worlds of enchanting wonder.

"The theater, the music department, and the art department offers organized activities in the arts to all capable students."

—WFU Student Handbook 1973-74

"Most students take literature to satisfy the fine arts requirement, and probably graduate from Wake Forest without ever having had a music or art or drama course. I will."

"If anything, a university should attempt to educate the whole man, mind and body, and a fine arts program will stimulate and extend such an education."

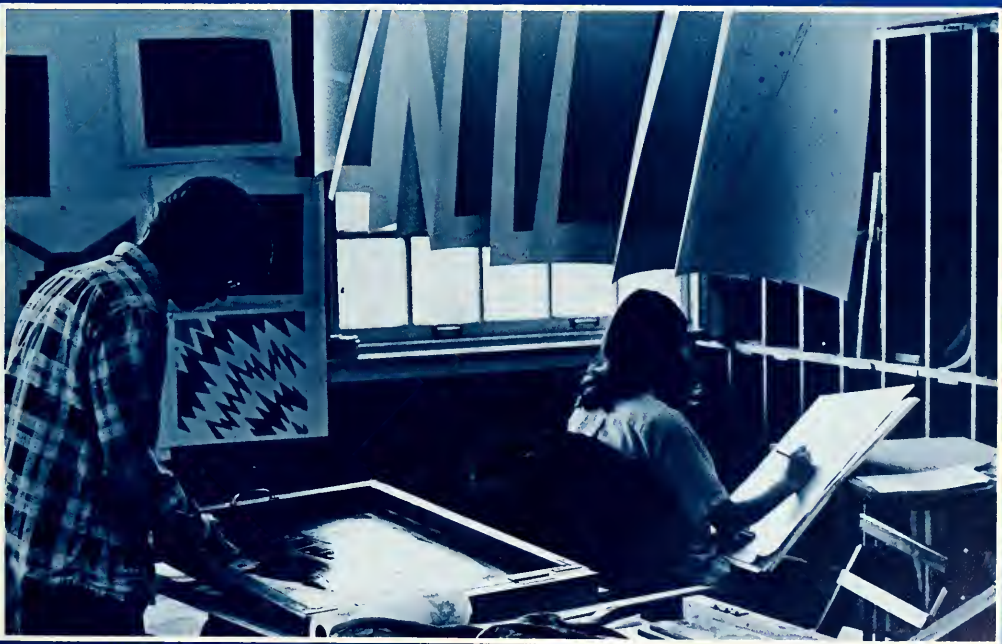

—WFU senior

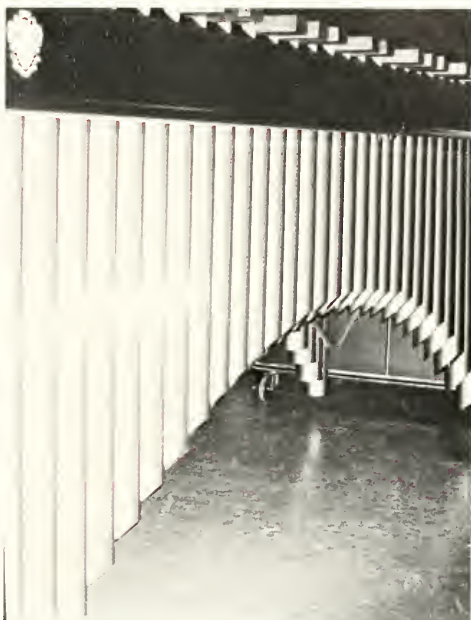

"Over the next few years here at Wake Forest we will be constructing and equipping a new building designed specifically to house the fine arts. Hopefully, as these new facilities become ready, the numbers and interests of our art students and staff will be growing also, creating more vitality in the artistic life here."

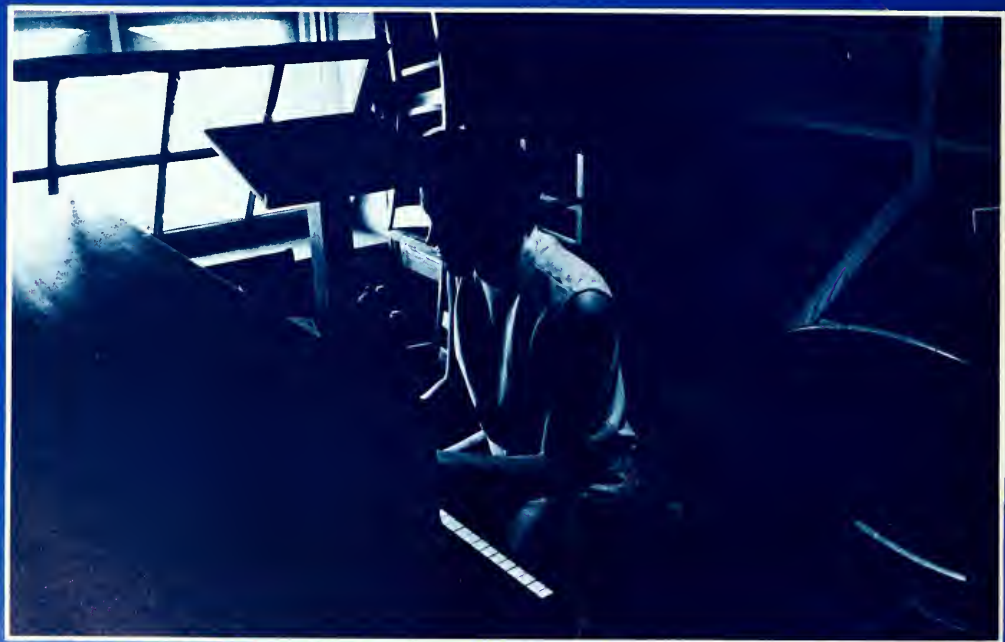

"I wish I could be here when we get the new Fine Arts Building. I love the music department at Wake, but the conditions for music majors are so sad."

The Census

ecause no one remained in the Forest forever, it was the custom that a census be taken yearly to picture the entire populace of this magical Realm. This census divided the populace into three groups: The Elders; those who soon would journey from the Forest; and those privileged inhabitants who would remain in the Forest for years to come. The Elders were those entrusted with the lore of the land. It was their obligation to lecture the inhabitants in the fine points of the interwoven myths of the Universe. Some were able to make the lore come alive through their own love of these myths. But there were other Elders who buried them under ponderous mounds of bovine feces.

The inhabitants of the Forest, both those who would soon journey from the Forest and those privileged to stay, devoted their time to absorbing the outpourings of the Elders. And such was life in the Forest.

The Heddlers

Though the community of the Realm produced many things, it was not self-sufficient, nor did it attempt any economic separation from the outside World. The Forest folk relied upon many peddlers and merchants outside the Forest for their daily necessities. These merchants would vie for the trade of the Forest, enticing the folk with quality goods and wares. With careful scrutiny and an eye for bargains, those of the Forest would barter for their needs and desires. Oft times, the merchants would win at this friendly game, but more than nought the people of the Forest would be contented with their lot.

Some merchants would even beam gilded smiles towards those of the Realm, giving support to many of their endeavors. Because of their continued support, many of the accomplishments of the Forest could be attributed to the constant faith of these benevolent merchants. Herein lies testimony to these men of great faith.

A rational alternative to rationing gas.

What's right with this picture? Well if it were true, we'd be saving 28 billion, 560 million gallons of gas every year.

How did we arrive at that figure? Since we're a nation of national averages, we know the average car uses about 735 gallons of gas a year. The Beetle, 399*. Turn the eighty-five million average cars on the road right now into Beetles, and it works out to a saving of 28,560,000,000 (give or take a few gallons).

Now we haven't figured out all the water and antifreeze that would be saved with the Beetle's air-cooled engine.

Nor can we compute the extra parking space that would be around.

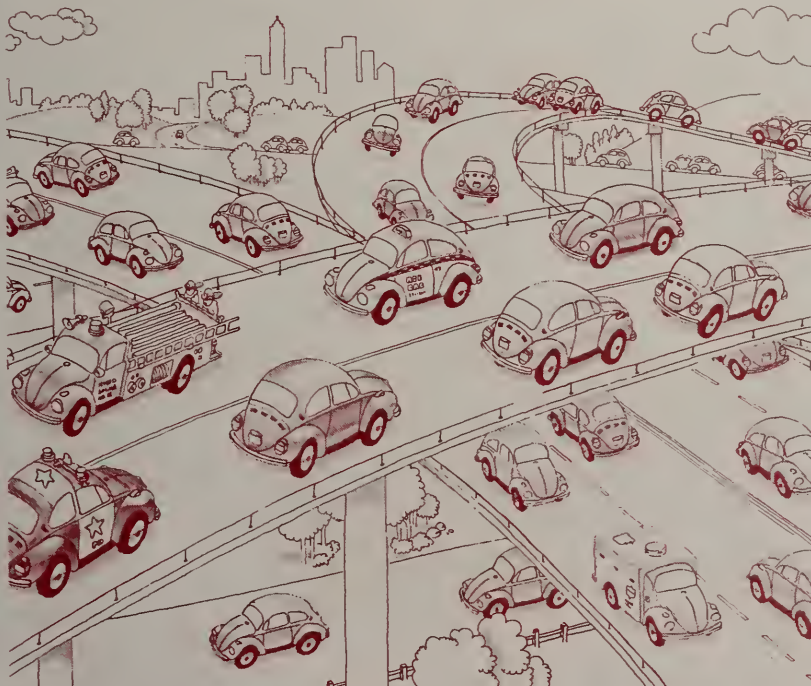

Nor to mention all the money people would be able to save in a world of Volkswagens.

But we know for sure that this is no pipe dream. There already are police car Beetles up in Ossining. And a custom built, chauffeur-driven Bug in L. A. And Volkswagen taxis all over Honduras. And a Beetle that herds cattle in Missouri.

So with gas prices going up and rationing becoming a reality, the Beetle never looked so good. In fact, you might almost call it beautiful.

The Spirit

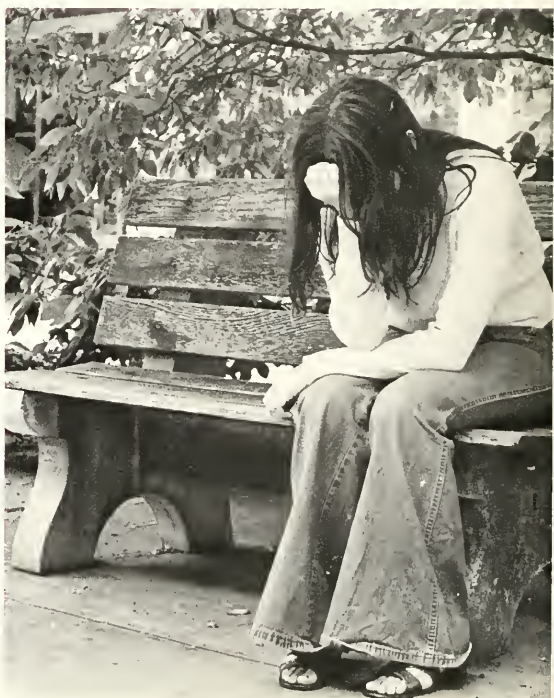

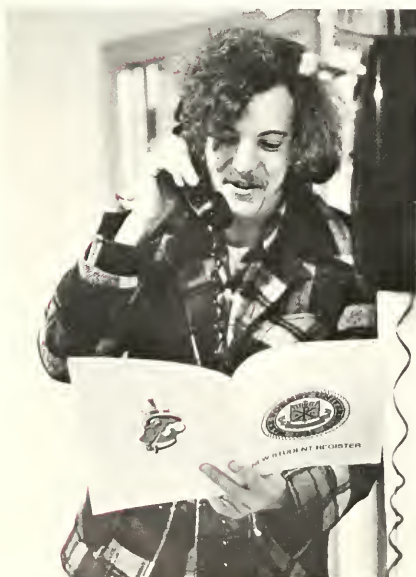

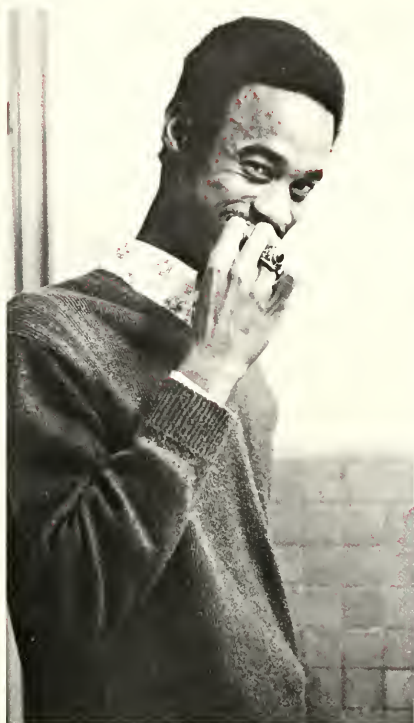

And then there were times when the unifying Spirit would settle upon the Forest. Thoughts of anguish and doubt, hatred and conflict, fear and envy, and lust and obsession would then dissolve into meaningless bliss. The vivid enchantment of the Spirit was readily seen in the expressions of mirth and joy, faith and fidelity, chivalry and valor, and passion and truth that would embrace the Realm. For fleeting moments, this enchantment would burst into vibrant flame, burning brightly the light of eternal Love, giving meaning to the past and hope to the Future.

And yet, this flame would flicker all too soon, forcing the Spirit to lift itself from the face of the Forest, leaving disenchantment and uncertainty throughout the Realm. But the faint glow of the flame was oft reflected in the countenances of those of the Realm, promising that the Spirit would indeed return.

Wake Forest in Venice

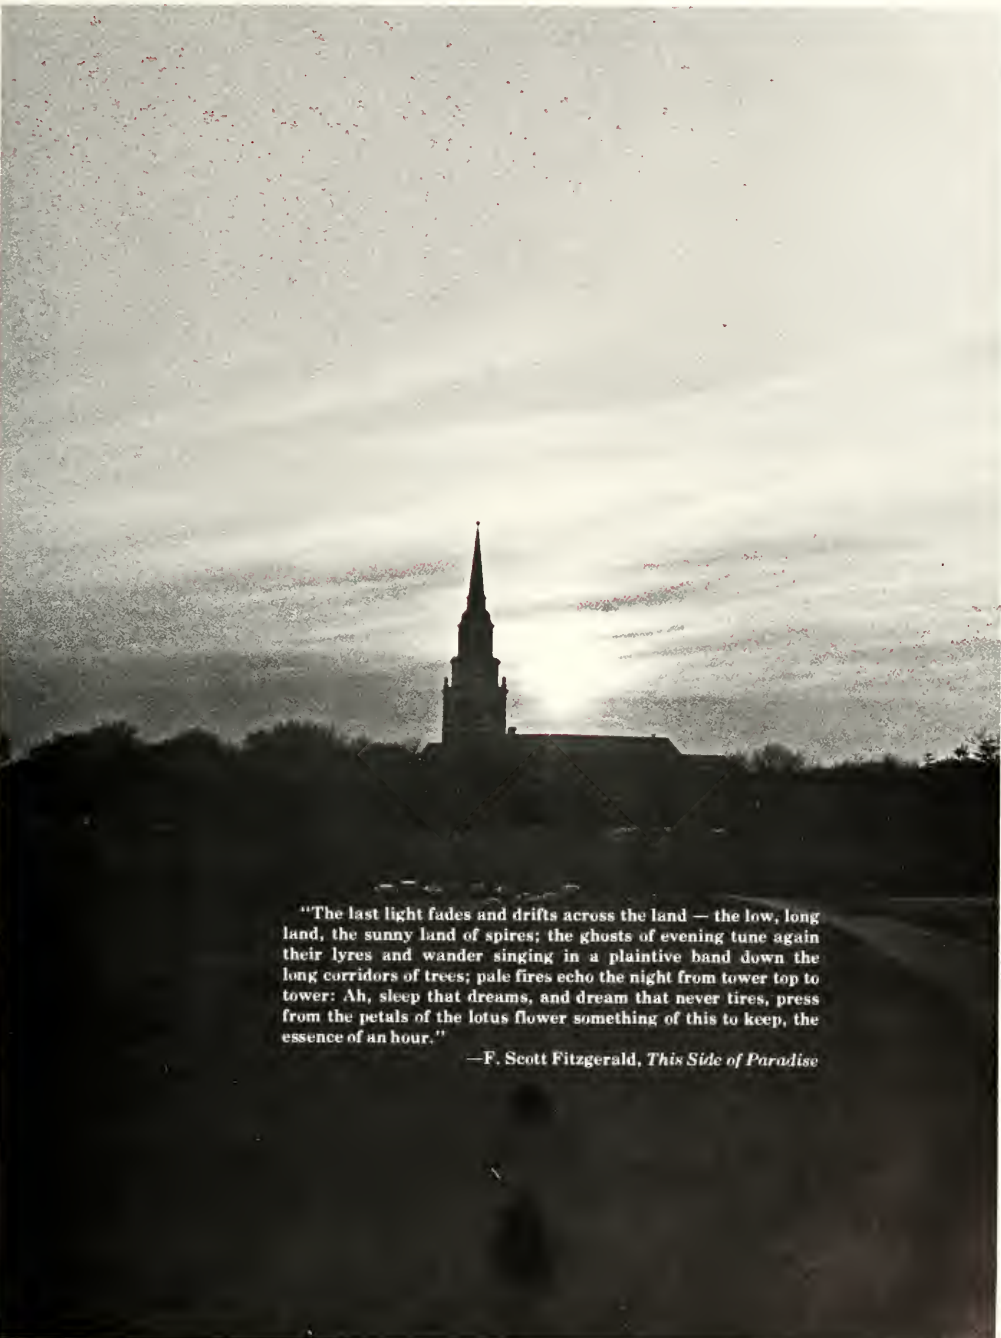

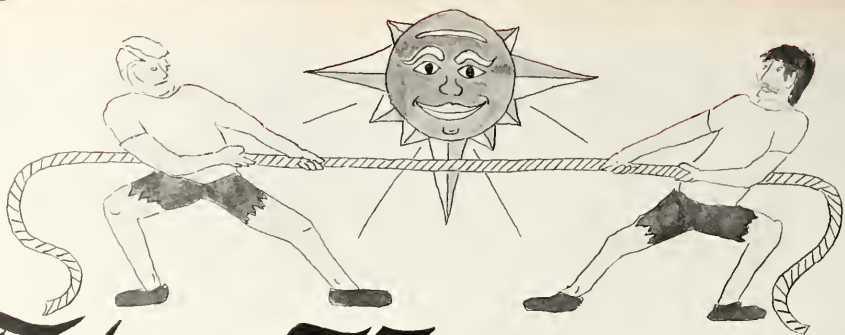

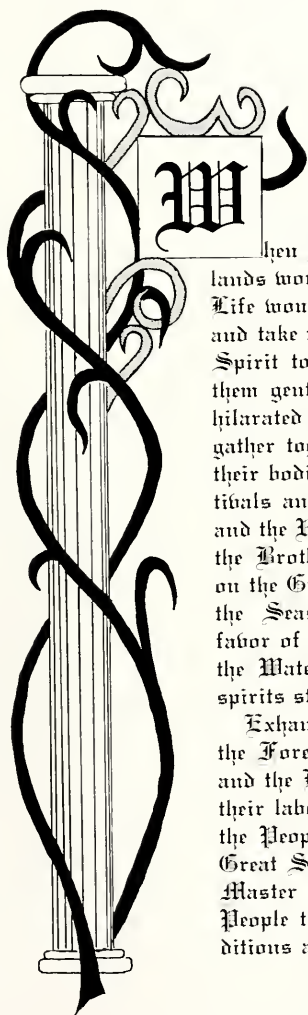

"The last light fades and drifts across the land — the low, long land, the sunny land of spires; the ghosts of evening tune again their lyres and wander singing in a plaintive band down the long corridors of trees; pale fires echo the night from tower top to tower: Ah, sleep that dreams, and dream that never tires, press from the petals of the lotus flower something of this to keep, the essence of an hour."

—F. Scott Fitzgerald, This Side of Paradise

The Festival

When Spring came to the Forest, the Wetlands would take on a festive air. The Spirit of Life would come once again from under Earth and take up residence amongst the boughs. The Spirit touched those of the Forest, prodding them gently to a festive air. The People, exhilarated by the freshness of the Season, would gather together in joyous merriment, exposing their bodies to Sol's caresses. Dionysian festivals and tournaments filled the Great Quad and the Realm of the Lord. Girding their loins, the Brotherhoods of the Forest would gather on the Grassy Plains for the Great Games of the Season, Jesting and Jousting for the favor of the fair Maidens. Others gathered on the Waters of the Highlands as the flowing spirits stumbled and swayed through the Land.

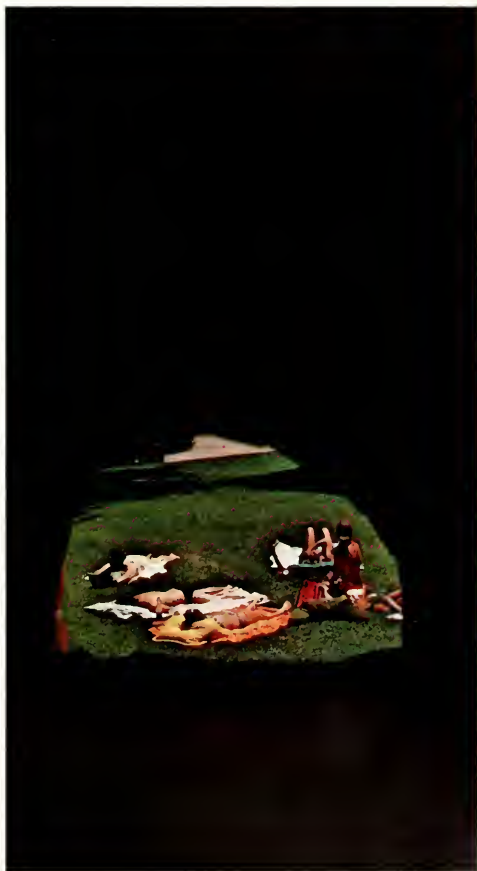

Exhausted by their festivities, the People of the Forest turned once again to their Labors and the Lore of the Elders. As a Reward for their labors, the Men of Wisdom would gather the People near the Chapel of Wait and sing Great Songs to their Mother, the Forest. The Master of the Castle would then charge the People to depart the Realm and carry its traditions and Learning to other Lands.

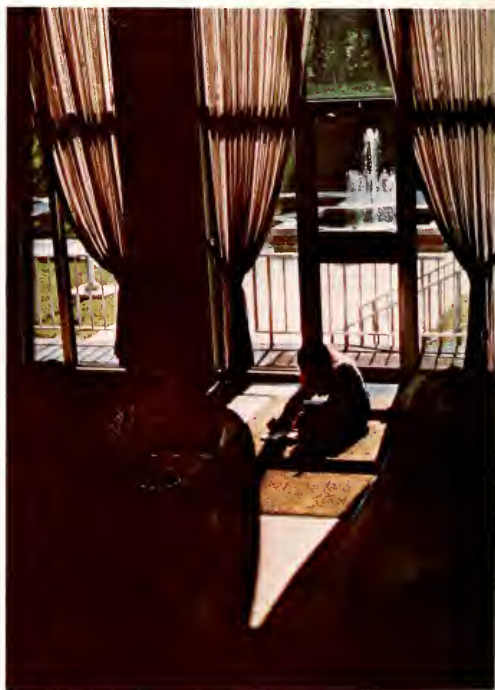

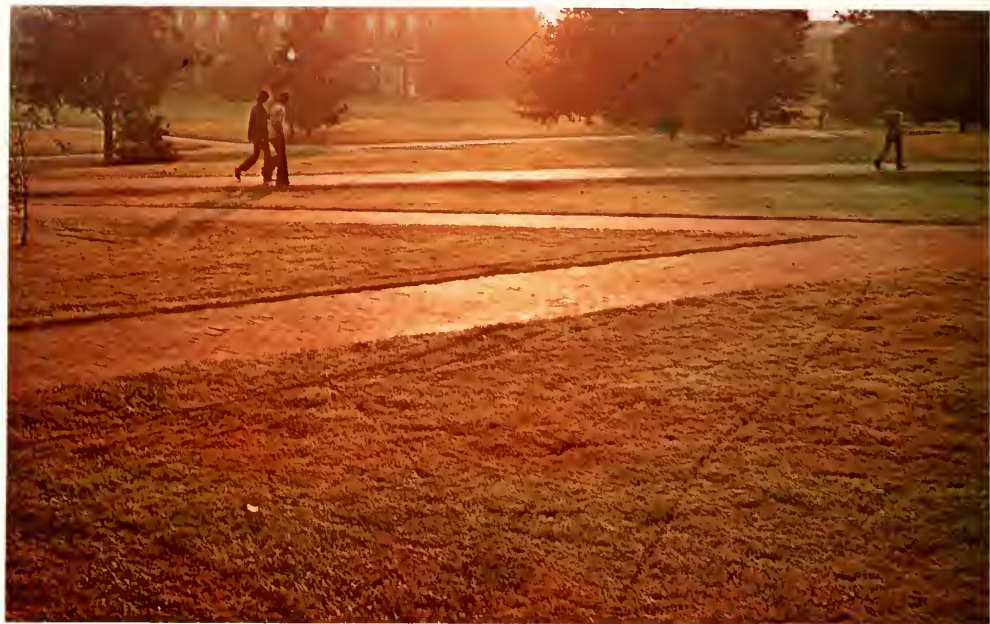

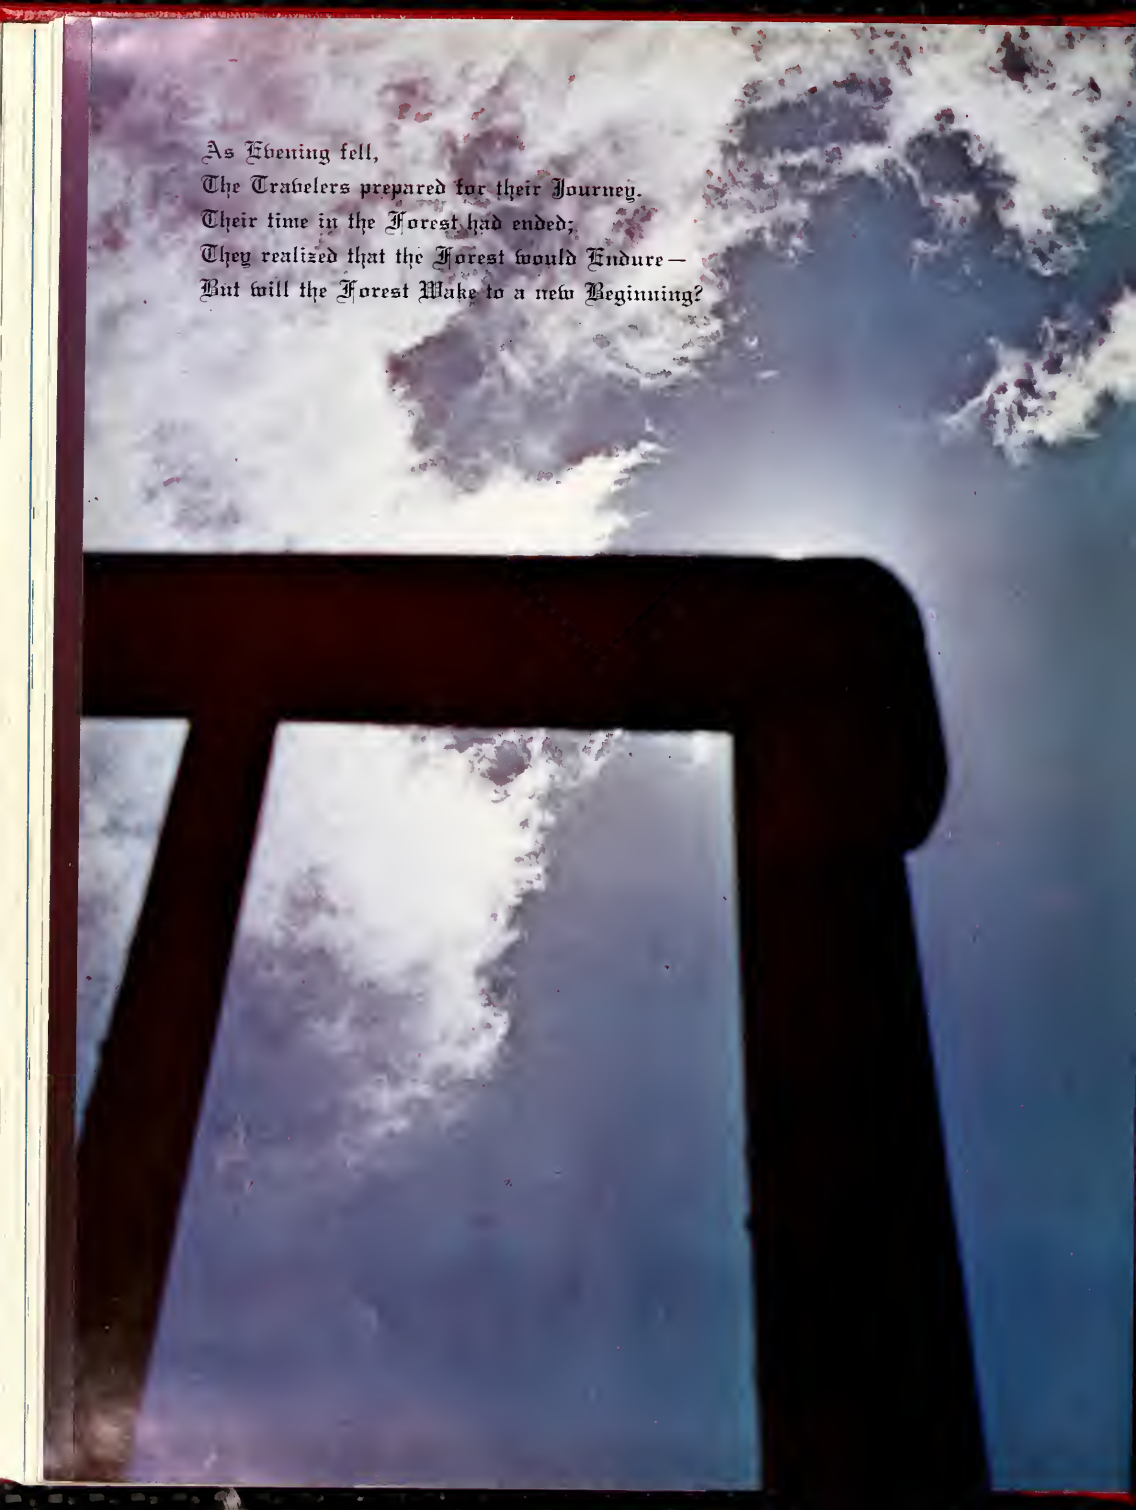

As Evening fell,
The Travelers prepared for their Journey.
Their time in the Forest had ended;
They realized that the Forest would Endure —
But will the Forest Wake to a new Beginning?
